The International Gakyil resolves votes based on the simple majority of those present. In the case of a tie, the vote of the President prevails and in his absence, the vote of the Vice President prevails.

Whenever necessary, the International Gakyil can meet, deliberate and cast votes via video or telephone conference or via electronic mail, as long as all the members have the possibility of participating in discussions and the decision-making process.

Any member whose separation would make it impossible to form a valid quorum shall remain productively in office until a qualified replacement takes office.

If for any reason one or more of the elected members of the International Gakyil cease to perform their function, the International Gakyil, having asked for the opinion of the Honorary President, will appoint their replacement. These new members will remain in office until the next Assembly. For the purposes of a possible re-election, partial duration of the office will be counted as a full year, if it exceeds six months.

If the majority of the Gakyil members are unable to participate, the members remaining in office shall call a meeting of the Assembly to replace them.
